

MONTPELIER

Miss Lillian F. Gould the Bride of Citation Man in U. S. Service.

The marriage of Miss Lillian F. Gould, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gould, and Abraham Aron of Montpelier took place in Bailey hall at 7 o'clock Sunday evening in the presence of about 200 of the relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Samuel Rapoport of Springfield, Mass., assisted by Rev. Max Cohen of Montpelier. During the ceremony an orchestra played soft music. The bride was given away by Mr. and Mrs. Gould, having been conducted to a canopy in the center of the hall, where she was met by the groom. Those in attendance at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Aron, the former a brother of the groom, Mrs. Jacob Nathan, who is a sister of the bride. The bridesmaid was Miss Eva Yett, daughter of Harris Yett of Montpelier, while the best man was Philip Stokeloch of Montpelier. The bride was dressed in silk georgette crepe and sash with hand embroidery and beaded trimmings. She wore a bride's veil, set with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of roses and carnations. Her maid wore a black satin dress, trimmed with maline, and carried roses. The orchestra played a march and after the ceremony the bride and groom, with their parents and other relatives, people marched into the dining room where a beautiful banquet was served, after which a reception took place, dancing being in order until past midnight, during which many congratulations were showered upon the bride and groom. The bride is a native of Rogoz, Russia, but came to Montpelier with her parents when small and has since lived in this city. She was graduated from Montpelier high school in 1915 and from the teachers' course in the same school the following year and for three years she has taught in Easton, Pa. The groom, like the bride, is a native of Rogoz, Russia. He came to Montpelier when a youth and grew up in the city, having entered business with his brothers in the city in the Montpelier Iron & Metal Works. He served in France and was brought into prominence when he left here May 24, 1918, in the highest contingent of the army because of the fact that he went into service suffering from the effects of a broken rib which he received in an automobile accident in Barre a few days before he left for Camp Devens, Pa. He was assigned to the 30th machine gun company of the 77th division and saw service on the Argonne and Verdun fronts in the war. He was twice wounded. He was No. 1 man in the machine gun company, therefore was the man who did the firing of the machine guns to which he and his companions were assigned. He received a citation for bravery in action. He was returned to this country early last May and was discharged from service May 25, or a year and a day from the time he went into service. Mr. and Mrs. Aron have received many wedding presents and will make their home on Harrison avenue in Montpelier.

Joseph Abair, who was a member of the 101st ammunition train under General Clarence H. Edwards' command, stated Sunday evening that the boys from Montpelier had sent a telegram to Senator W. P. Dillingham, protesting against the action promoting other generals over General Edwards. This is in accord with the action that has been taken by the soldiers of New England who fought under General Edwards, who was generally popular with the men in his command.

Susan and Tony Guerni of Waterbury were in Montpelier city court Saturday afternoon on charges of illegal handling of liquor. Mrs. Guerni was charged with illegal selling, while her husband was charged both with illegal selling and keeping with the intent to sell. They were placed under $400 bail for a hearing that will take place later this week in Waterbury. The arrests are the result of a raid that was pulled off in Waterbury. At that time they were brought into Montpelier and then the cases were appealed to Montpelier city court, but State's Attorney E. R. Davis filed information against the two persons, and they came to Montpelier Saturday afternoon, pleading not guilty to the charges made against them. Tony Guerni came near getting in contempt of court by continuing effort to discuss his case and to talk about the injustice of his not being notified that he would have to have bail in the matter. He was cautioned not to stop and then the court, calling for order, ordered Guerni that unless he quit talking to Guerni that place the man in the custody of the sheriff. Arthur Pudvart was placed under $300 bail as a principal witness, to appear at the next hearing in the matter.

Rev. P. J. Long, during the morning service at St. Augustine's church in Montpelier, made a very interesting statement to those attending the service, during which he stated that the church is now clear of debt, that all obligations have been paid off and that he did not expect to have contributions collected each Sunday but hereafter about three or four times a year. Father Long came to Montpelier a little over four years ago. At that time there were incumbrances on the church property amounting to about $22,000, which have been paid off. In addition to this, many repairs have been made and the obligations in connection with the Catholic cemetery have been removed.

There were present 17 members and five guests, who passed the afternoon in listening to an excellent program. Miss Edith Marcell, one of the guests, gave a selection upon the piano at the opening of the meeting, which was much enjoyed, and this was followed by the salute and pledge to the flag, and the ritual service of the opening. A little matter of business followed, and then the roll was called by the secretary, to which the members responded by quotations furnished by Mrs. Chedel. One Result of Senate's Failure.

One of the inevitable consequences of the Senate's action in rejecting the treaty of Versailles is sketched in a letter from one of the ablest and most influential of French journalists to an American friend:

"What has come about is the destruction of all confidence in the capacity of American plenipotentiaries to negotiate."

"In five or six years, when an American president offers us a treaty on any subjects whatever, we shall reply to him: 'No thanks. What can you give us in the way of guarantee that your Senate will ratify? Bring us first the consent of the Senate. Then we will talk.'"

The Republicans do not appear to understand that in discrediting Wilson as a negotiator of treaties, they, at the same time, discredit for three generations future presidents of the United States who try to negotiate treaties."

This is precisely what has happened. Quite aside from the immediate results of the rejection of the treaty of peace, the Senate has dealt a staggering blow to the prestige of the United States as a great power."

No foreign statesman can hereafter be expected to waste time and energy on a treaty with the United States, no matter how important, in view of the exhibition that the Senate has given of its power wantonly to destroy everything that diplomacy has succeeded in accomplishing. He can have no assurance that negotiations with the United States are worth while unless the president and more than two-thirds of the senators belong to the same political party, which rarely happens."

The imperial German government devoted four years to systematic attempt to discredit the United States as a power in international affairs, but failed to do in four years Henry Cabot Lodge and his Republican associates in the Senate managed to do in four months. They wholly wrecked the diplomatic prestige of this country, and are now insisting that nothing shall be salvaged."

Does Gibson Want Dale's Seat?

We hear it from decidedly good authority that Hon. E. W. Gibson of Brattleboro is not politically interested in entering the governorship contest. Little rumor has it that his eyes are on congressional Dale's seat in Congress. Such an announcement coming direct from "Gib" would be real interesting to his many friends.—Waterbury Record.

GOVERNMENT LIFE INSURANCE.

Can Be Continued by Men Discharged from U. S. Service.

It is regrettable that so many service men are not keeping up their government life insurance issued through the bureau of war risk insurance in Washington. The fact seems to be due largely to widespread confusion and lack of information as to the right of former service men to permanent government life insurance, and the process by which this insurance may be reinstated.

The demobilization of our armed forces was so rapid and was attended by such uncertainty on the part of service men as to future civil occupations and permanent places of abode that it was not surprising that many of the men gave little thought to the matter of insurance. Others, doubtless thought the original term insurance (war-time insurance) ceased when they were demobilized and did not know it might be converted into any one of the several forms of permanent government life insurance (converted insurance). Still others, immediately upon their return to civil life, felt financially unable to continue the insurance. They should now take advantage of the liberal provisions for reinstatement.

The government is determined that no former service man shall lose his right to government insurance through lack of knowledge of conditions. To this end, the press, the pulpit, bankers, physicians and other professional men, and the great volunteer agencies of social welfare like the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. H. A., the Salvation Army, the War camp community service, the boy scouts, and many others are now co-operating with the bureau of war risk insurance in an educational campaign designed to reach the former service men, wherever located, and tell them the government is now committed to the policy of permanent life insurance for its soldiers, sailors and marines.

Term insurance (war-time insurance), if it has lapsed, may be easily reinstated within 18 months from the date of discharge, by stating in the application that the applicant is in as good health as at date of discharge, and by the payment of only two months' premiums on the amount of insurance to be reinstated. And this term insurance (war-time insurance) may be converted into one of several forms of government policies.
